The Mass intentions are now listed in the weekly calendar.

THE BIBLE STUDY

The Gospel of Luke

A bad man's good example (Luke 16:1-13): This is a difficult parable to interpret. The reason is that apparently, the master who was upset with the steward finally appreciates his cleverness, though he cheated the master further. Of course, a parable is not to be taken literally, rather the moral lesson to be appreciated.

The steward was a dishonest man. He was a slave, but he was nonetheless in charge of the running of his master's estate. In Palestine there were many absentee landlords. The master may well have been one of these, and his business may well have been entrusted to his steward's hands. The steward had followed a career of embezzlement.

The debtors were also equally dishonest. No doubt what they owed was rent. Rent was often paid to a landlord, not in money, but in kind. It was often an agreed proportion of the produce of the part of the estate which had been rented. The steward knew that he had lost his job. He, therefore, had a brilliant idea. He falsified the entries in the books so that the debtors were debited with far less than they owed. This would have two effects. First, the debtors would be grateful to him; and second, and much more effective, he had involved the debtors in his own misdemeanors, and, if the worst came to the worst, he was now in a strong position to exercise a little judicious blackmail!

The master himself seemed to be very strange, for, instead of being shocked at the whole proceeding, he appreciated the shrewd brain behind it and actually praised the steward for what he had done. The difficulty of the parable is clearly seen from the fact that Luke attaches no fewer than four different lessons to it.

(i) In Luke 16:8 the lesson is that the sons of this world are wiser in their generation than the sons of light. That means that, if only the Christian was as eager and ingenious in his attempt to attain goodness as the man of the world is in his attempt to attain money and comfort, he would be a much better man. If only men would give as much attention to the things which concern their souls as they do to the things which concern their business, they would be much better men. Over and over again a man will expend twenty times the amount of time and money and effort on his pleasure, his hobby, his garden, his sport as he does on his church. Our Christianity will begin to be real and effective only when we spend as much time and effort on it as we do on our worldly activities.

(ii) In Luke 16:9: the lesson is that material possessions should be used to cement the friendships wherein the real and permanent value of life lies. That could be done in two ways.

(a) It could be done as it affects eternity. The Rabbis had a saying, "The rich help the poor in this world, but the poor help the rich in the world to come." St. Ambrose, commenting on the rich fool who built bigger barns to store his goods, said, "The bosoms of the poor, the houses of widows, the mouths of children are the barns which last forever." It was a Jewish belief that charity given to poor people would stand to a man's credit in the world to come. A man's true wealth would consist not in what he kept, but in what he gave away.

(b) It could be done as it affects this world. A man can use his wealth selfishly or he can use it to make life easier, not only for himself, but for his friends and his fellow-men. How many a scholar is forever grateful to a rich man who gave or left money to found bursaries and scholarships which made a university career possible! How many a man is grateful to a better-off friend who saw him through some time of need in the most practical way! Possessions are not in themselves a sin, but they are a great responsibility, and the man who uses them to help his friends has gone far to discharge that responsibility.

SPIRIT LIFTERS

Feb. 1st - He who has no money is poor, but he who has nothing but money is the poorest of all.

Feb. 2nd - Hold to a true friend with both hands.

Feb. 3rd - A good thing to remember And a better thing to do, Is to work with the construction gang and not the wrecking crew.

Feb. 4th - The only sharp-edged tool that gets sharper with use is the tongue.

Feb. 5th - To overlook the little things in life is to miss the biggest part of life itself.

Feb. 6th - "Cheerfulness and content are great beautifiers and are famous preservers of youthful looks."

Feb. 7th - The person who is always finding fault, seldom finds anything else.

St. Vincent de Paul Corner

In the Gospel today Jesus gives us the Beatitudes, which embody a radically alternative vision of life and we find that God indeed calls us to blessedness.

Your gift to the Society of St. Vincent de Paul proclaims the gospel of the kingdom and brings healing to the broken hearts of those who live in poverty.
